

Join us on May 17 for IEI's FutureWork Prosperity Tour!

The Institute for Emerging Issues (IEI) at NC State University, along with our partner organization the Greater Statesville Chamber of Commerce, invites you to attend our "FutureWork Prosperity Tour" stakeholder convening on May 17 from 9:00-11:00 a.m. in Statesville. Because you are a leader who is central to the issues related to the future of work, we need your voice to be part of this very important conversation about the future of your region in North Carolina's Southwest Prosperity Zone, as defined by the NC Department of Commerce.

With the help of the Duke Energy Foundation and Local Government Federal Credit Union, and key local partners, the FutureWork Prosperity Tour will bring a bus and technology resources to each of North Carolina's eight Prosperity Zones.

The stakeholder convening will introduce you to the data, themes, and resources from the 2016 Emerging Issues Forum, FutureWork, where more than 1,100 business, education and policy leaders (and hundreds more through livestream and UNC-TV's North Carolina Channel) gathered to consider: As technology and demography shift, how can North Carolina prepare today to create enough good jobs for tomorrow?

IEI projects in its FutureWork Disruption Index that on average, North Carolina counties face potential losses of more than 25% of their current jobs and nearly 20% of current wages within one generation as a result of automation and related technologies. In the wake of the Forum, leaders from across the state have expressed a need for additional information and continued conversation as they wrestle with the question of whether their region's talent development systems are FutureWork ready.

The goal of this tour will be two-fold. First, IEI will host an information session at an educational institution in your area to engage students in thinking about how best to align their educational plans with tomorrow's realities. Second, at this regional stakeholder convening, the Institute will 1) discuss the projected demographic and economic shifts; 2) explore with local leaders job loss projections for your region; and 3) examine how job skills have changed over time, and discuss what we can do to prepare tomorrow's workforce.

In addition, the Institute will learn from you and your local leaders about how best to prepare for this changing economy. IEI will use this information to inform future discussion with the state's policy leaders at the NC General Assembly, nonprofit leaders, state agencies, and industry leaders.

Register today! We hope you'll join the Institute for Emerging Issues and the Greater Statesville Chamber of Commerce, along with other key leaders from business, government, and higher education. Together, we can strengthen the competitiveness and prosperity of our great state!

For a prosperous North Carolina,

Anita R. Brown-Graham
Director

Donnie Charleston
Economy Policy Manager